Introduction

The Arkansas Coalition Against Domestic Violence (ACADV) is a nonprofit organization that has served both rural and urban areas of Arkansas since its inception in 1981. The membership consists of domestic violence service providers and others who demonstrate support for the philosophy, goals and objectives of the ACADV.

MISSION: The mission of the Coalition is to eliminate domestic violence and promote healthy families.

GOALS:

- To strengthen the existing support systems serving victims and their children.
- To develop legislation that provides legal protection to victims.
- To promote public policies which meet the needs of victims.
- To pursue funding for programs working with victims and their children.
- To provide training for the public and those working with victims.

In 2021, the ACADV received funding to launch the State's first-ever set of standards and best practices for domestic violence intervention programs (DVIP) – formerly known as domestic violence intervention programs or DVIP. As part of our dedication to eliminating domestic violence, we are well equipped and have the appropriate resources to provide the oversight that has been missing for domestic violence offender accountability programs.

Code of Ethics, Values, and Principles

All service providers that are members of the ACADV – Domestic Violence Intervention Program (DVIP), shall abide by the following code of ethics and values.

- a. Survivor stories are center
 - a. The safety and rights of survivors must be the highest priority;
 - b. It is not the responsibility of a survivor to hold the batterer accountable. Batterers are solely responsible for their violent and abusive behavior;
 - c. Effective DVIP providers should consult with advocates who work directly with women to develop new programs, assess the need for substantial program policy changes within existing programs, and conduct periodic program reviews;
- b. Accountability is active and intentional
 - a. Service providers shall recognize that there are limitations to a batterer intervention program or DVIP. Intervention is not a guarantee that a batterer will cease their violence and abuse;
 - b. Service providers should never state that a batterer is, or will be, nonviolent upon completion of the program's requirements;
- c. Domestic violence offenders are a separate category of violent offenders and require a specialized intervention;
- d. Community and local culture are fully respected
 - a. Intervention programs alone do not create batterer accountability. They are a component of a larger community response that includes the courts, probation and parole, and the legal and law enforcement systems;
 - b. Service providers should be engaged as a community partner that supports cultural movements to end violence and abuse;
- e. Equity, accessibility, and inclusion
 - a. Interpreters, reasonable accommodations, and flexible hours are an essential element to ensuring all who need these programs can access and engage with the program.

Additionally, all service providers will utilize the following definition and understanding of domestic violence: Domestic violence is caused by one person seeking to gain and maintain power and control over another person, using a pattern of methods, tactics, and behaviors.

Importantly, all service providers shall agree to the following core principles:

- Battering is a pattern of behavior, not a standalone event
- Battering is NOT an addiction or disease, and NOT caused by alcohol or substance abuse
- Batterers are solely responsible for their actions, and must be held accountable for their violence and abuse
- DVIP service providers shall remain neutral in court settings to prevent collusion or manipulation by abusers, if subpoenaed.
- The goal of the DVIP program is to address the batterer's use of violence and abuse, NOT to reunite a family or couple

Diversity, Equity, & Inclusion

Around the world, domestic violence has impacted the lives of virtually every man, woman, and child. Violence does not discriminate based on culture, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, religion, or any demographic that comes to mind. Furthermore, the methods in which power and control can be exploited against a person are limitless when a batterer makes the decision to abuse their loved one(s).

The Arkansas Coalition Against Domestic Violence strives to ensure every victim and survivor is recognized, their rights amplified, and their story is told. For the offenders, we take accountability seriously and must balance the voices of survivors with the needs of batterers seeking rehabilitation. For the Domestic Violence Intervention Program (DVIP) Advisory Board, the pages that follow will include the broadest possible view of diversity, consider all the ways possible to expand access to these programs for the community at large, and include as many voices and backgrounds in the development and enforcement of standards.

We welcome that every person brings a unique perspective and experience to advance our mission and progress our fight to eliminate domestic violence and promote healthy families.

Trauma-Informed DVIP

All domestic violence intervention programs (DVIP) should strive to be trauma-informed through the incorporation of three key elements:

- realize the prevalence of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs), trauma, and vicarious trauma
- recognize how trauma impacts all individuals involved with the program, organization, and system (including their own workforce);
- respond to the prevalence of trauma by putting knowledge of trauma into practice.

Importantly, all service providers should strive to understand the importance of trauma-informed care in the context of supporting survivors and victims of domestic violence. For these purposes, trauma-informed care is:

- based on the recognition that many behaviors and responses expressed by survivors are related to traumatic experiences
- led by the victim to ensure that the people being serviced have authority over their own life choices, no action will be taken on behalf of a victim/their family without the informed, and time-limited, consent of the victim.

Coordinated Community Response

A batterer intervention program should not exist without a coordinated community response to domestic violence and abuse. A batterer intervention program must not exist in isolation, as it is only one component of a coordinated community response.

A coordinated community response identifies domestic violence and intervenes consistently. This response requires the creation of cooperative strategies that effectively deliver a consistent and supportive response to survivors. A batterer intervention program should have a particularly collaborative and interactive relationship with the community's victim services agencies.

The priority of a coordinated community response to domestic violence is the safety and protection of those who have been battered. This approach holds batterers accountable for their violence and abuse. A coordinated response to domestic violence includes community education that builds community awareness and results in a unified demand for a zero-tolerance response to domestic violence. Communities need to develop and maintain community responses that bring together all organizations and systems that have contact with survivors or perpetrators of domestic violence. This can include representatives from:

- Domestic violence intervention program (DVIP);
- Children's protective services;
- Children's service providers;
- Clergy and the faith community;
- Domestic violence programs;
- Hospitals;
- Judges;
- Law enforcement;
- Legal services;
- Mental health agencies;
- Probation and parole;
- Prosecuting attorneys;
- School districts;
- Substance abuse programs;
- Survivor service providers;
- Attorney/Guardian ad litem;
- Culturally specific organizations that serve marginalized communities;
- Programs that promote non-abusive parenting; and
- Any and all other agencies involved in providing services to batterers, survivors or their children.

 - Any staff and facilitators who are on the child maltreatment, adult maltreatment registry, and/ or sex offender registry are prohibited from facilitating a group or individual sessions.
 - No staff or facilitator shall have a personal or professional relationship outside of the DVIP program with any client (abusive partner or victim) or immediate family member of the client. If a relationship is determined to exist, the service provider or staff will be held to the program's code of conduct.

Screenings & Risk Assessments

All member DVIP service providers will utilize one of the following evidence-based pre and post-screening tools to measure the impact of their program. This data will be de-identified and shared with ACADV each quarter, for evaluation and analysis purposes.

Suggested Screening Tools:

- Domestic Violence Inventory (DVI)
- VAW Scale

In order for domestic violence intervention programs to work effectively with batterers, it is important for service providers to have an understanding of the potential level of risk of harm and/or lethality of the batterer. However, there is no one instrument or tool that will perfectly predict the risk of danger or lethality posed to a victim by their batterer. The process of assessing and managing risk in the context of domestic violence is dynamic and complex. Programs are encouraged to use various established tools and methods for risk assessment, with a realistic understanding of what the tools can assess and how to interpret the results.

Dual – Victim Services & DVIP Provider

For programs that operate a victim service program and wish to add a domestic violence intervention program (DVIP), the following recommendations apply:

- Each organization must maintain separate facilities and staff for their DVIP and victim services.
 - Dual advocates and/or facilitators are prohibited.
 - Location, hours, and/or availability of DVIP sessions must remain separate from victim services to avoid offenders encountering survivors in any capacity. DVIP sessions are prohibited from being offered out of a domestic violence shelter program.
 - If possible, the DVIP program will operate on separate properties to reduce any potential contact between offenders and survivors.
 - All records and resources associated with victim services must remain kept in a separate, and secure area where offenders have no access.
 - For locations that are utilizing a shared administrative space for DVIP and victim services, additional security measures need to be put in place to ensure complete separation of services and confidentiality of victim services. We recommend a minimum of two-lock-separation (i.e. a locked door and a locked file cabinet OR password-protected digital storage).
- Any services or resources for victims (i.e. support groups) will not be posted in public spaces for dual programs.

Curriculum / Core Concepts

The following is a list of evidence-based curricula that the ACADV endorses for member DVIP service providers and those seeking to become a “qualified professional” for facilitation purposes. A service provider may utilize any combination of these curricula or just one, so long as they maintain training and continuing education requirements for each curriculum’s guidelines and all evaluation components.

- Duluth Model
- Family Peace Institute – “River of Cruelty”
- STOP Domestic Violence Program by David Wexler
- Domestic Abuse Project (DAP)
- EMERGE – Counseling & Education
- NOMAS

Curriculums will be reviewed by the DVIP Advisory Board for approval and addition to this list. The Advisory Board will meet each quarter, a calendar with meeting dates of this group and other details can be found on the ACADV website: www.domesticpeace.com.

Accessibility

ACADV will provide resources and referrals for language interpretation and culturally relevant needs. Each program shall maintain compliance with federal ADA regulations.

Prohibited to include in DVIP

For service providers, the following components are prohibited from occurring during the DVIP sessions. Each DVIP provider can refer to or recommend these programs, but they cannot be a part of their DVIP curriculum.

- Couples counseling
- Family Counseling
- Mediation

Please note – the purpose of DVIP sessions is not to reunite a family and/or couple and as such, family members or partners shall not participate in any group and/or individual DVIP sessions.

Women who use force

Abuse cannot and should not be condoned under any circumstance, all DVIP providers in the ACADV membership understand and prioritize the safety and rights of victims/survivors. Women who use violence and abuse are ultimately responsible for their actions, however, decades of research into this topic area have demonstrated that a disproportionate percentage of female clients in DVIP have utilized violence as a way to defend themselves or their children; disrupt the power and control tactics used against them, and as an attempt to end the violence they may be experiencing themselves. DVIP providers should consider these motivations for violence when serving female clients.

For women who have been referred to domestic violence intervention (DVIP), the ACADV encourages service providers to utilize the following framework to better serve the female clients in their DVIP sessions.

- Women who use violence often do so in the context of a relationship that is violent; women often use violence in self-defense or as an attempt to protect themselves or their children from the predominantly abusive partner;
- All people are capable of abusive behaviors; and
- Battering is a pattern of assaultive and coercive behaviors that include physical, sexual, emotional, and psychological attacks, as well as other forms of coercion, that batterers use against their intimate partners.

Virtual DVIP Sessions

It is strongly recommended that all DVIP sessions are conducted in person. However, if virtual DVIP sessions are being conducted, they should adhere to the following minimum guidelines:

- Only available if the offender resides over sixty (60) miles from the DVIP location, exceptions to this rule can be approved on a case-by-case basis and are dependent on each program's specific rules;
- Participants must agree to abide by the program standards and rules, including any additional rules specific to the virtual session;
 - For example, cameras must remain on, stable internet, appropriate equipment to participate virtually (headphones, microphones, speakers, etc...) no drinking alcohol or smoking/vaping during the session, no eating food during the session, and participants must show a 360 degree (full view) of the room they are in to ensure they are alone for the duration of the session.
- Participants must have prior approval from the DVIP program and/or facilitators in order to attend virtual DVIP sessions.

Intake procedures:

The ACADV has developed a sample intake form for service providers that includes all recommended questions. As part of the intake procedure, the batterer must sign an informed consent for services document stating they have received and understand all program policies and procedures. Each service provider should collect the following data for all new clients:

- Basic identifying information (must be 18 years old or otherwise emancipated);
- Demographic information;
- Violence used in the family of origin;
- Current or former partner(s);
- Criminal history, including arrests, and/or convictions;
- Pending court actions or charges;
- Descriptive history of his use of violence and other abusive behaviors, including those within and outside of the intimate relationship; and
- History of mental health and substance abuse treatment.

Exclusion criteria:

Each service provider should have policies and procedures developed to determine if DVIP is not appropriate for the client.

Survivor / Partner Contact

The provider shall develop a process by which survivors can be informed of the program's structure, expectations, and confidentiality. For the service provider to remain confidential and neutral, the ACADV has a template letter for service providers to utilize to contact victims and notify them that their offender is enrolled in a DVIP program and resources for victim services. If contact can be made safely, it may be made only for the following reasons:

- To inform the survivor/current partner that the batterer's attendance or completion of the program does not guarantee that the batterer will not be violent or abusive;
- To inform the survivor/current partner that the victim is not responsible in any way for the batterer's success or failure in the program as responsibility for change lies solely with the batterer;
- To inform the survivor/current partner of the importance of continually assessing the options for safety, whether remaining in or leaving the relationship and resources for assistance in developing a safety plan;
- To provide information about local domestic violence advocacy agencies, survivor service providers, and information concerning Orders of Protection;
- To notify the survivor/current partner of the batterer's acceptance or non-acceptance in the program;
- To notify the survivor/current partner of the batterer's non-compliance with program guidelines or requirements;
- To notify the survivor/current partner regarding the batterer's supervision by state or local authorities;
- To inform the survivor/current partner of the batterer's scheduled program start date; and
- To report when the batterer presents a danger to himself or others.

It is not appropriate for the batterer intervention program to seek information about a batterer from the survivor/current partner. Should contact be made with the survivor/current partner, in any way, the following are limitations regarding survivor/current partner contact:

- No attempt should be made to encourage, persuade or coerce the survivor/current partner into disclosing information or having contact with the provider;
- No attempt will be made to suggest that information or contact by the survivor/current partner will positively affect the batterer's work with the provider;
- No attempt should be made to encourage, persuade or coerce the survivor/current partner into couples counseling;

- Under no circumstances should the provider share information about or from the survivor/current partner with the batterer; and
- Survivor/current partner contact will not be used as a method of evaluation to measure the program's success or the participant's completion of the program.
- Caution should be used to reduce dual relationships and/or conflicts of interest.

Program Completion

No batterer shall be labeled, certified, or guaranteed to be non-abusive because of completion in a batterer intervention program. Evidence of attitude/belief change indicated in the group by the batterer may not always translate to behavior change in the relationship with a survivor/current partner.

Programs must develop standards for participants' completion. At a minimum, the batterer will:

- Pay all fees in full; and
- Fulfill all program guidelines, to at minimum include the following:
 - o Take responsibility for personal abusive behaviors without blaming others;
 - o Demonstrate to staff an understanding of alternatives to abusive behavior;
 - o Demonstrate to staff the use of respectful language regarding survivor/current partner and an understanding of benefits of equal relationships; and
 - o Any and all other additional program components as determined appropriate by the service provider.

Compliance Criteria

All DVIP service providers of the ACADV will be evaluated each year, for their compliance to program standards and the impact of their services on domestic violence. Annual evaluations for members will include:

- Site visit from ACADV;
- Full review of policies and procedures;
- Walk-through of facilities to ensure ADA compliance and accessibility;
- One-on-one technical assistance; and
- Submission of quarterly/yearly encounter data.

Data Collection & Evaluation

As part of service providers' compliance with these standards, the ACADV recommends the following data, at minimum, to be collected for evaluation and feedback purposes.

- Demographic data on clients
 - Name;
 - Age;
 - Education history;
 - Residential address;
 - Criminal history (if any); and,
 - Marital status.
- Court data (for court-ordered clients)
 - Judge or Court who ordered participation;
 - Known charges and/or convictions;
 - Prior attendance and/or completion of other DVIP or intervention programs;

DVIP Advisory Board & Governance

The Domestic Violence Advisory Board is composed of a variety of legislators, service providers, judicial officers, victim service providers, and other professionals who are uniquely invested in the operations of domestic violence intervention programs (otherwise known as batterers intervention programs). The DVIP Advisory Board is overseen by the Arkansas Coalition Against Domestic Violence. This board shall meet once a quarter, starting in January 2023, to discuss the administrative needs of programs, updates to the DVIP standards, compliance issues, and other needs of the DVIP providers in Arkansas.

The board shall have 12 seats, with each seat designated as follows:

1. DVIP Service Providers x 2 of 2
2. Domestic Violence Expert x 3 of 3
3. Judges x 2 of 2
4. Attorney x 2 of 2
5. A representative from the Administrative Office of the Courts x 1 of 1
